Supreme Court Library Queensland (SCLQ) is committed to delivering innovative information services to our members to assist them in navigating legal content. We are continually improving and expanding our offering of online services.

Our most significant recent improvement in service delivery is the Virtual Legal Library (VLL), a groundbreaking online resource helping eligible users with legal research and case preparation.

VLL provides free online access to over 135 key legal resources in the areas of civil, criminal and family law from leading publishers CCH, LexisNexis and Thomson Reuters.

Available publications include core commentary services, law reports, textbooks and journals.

Eligibility criteria

VLL is currently available to Queensland Law Society (QLS) members who are:

- sole practitioners, or
- from small firms with five or less practising certificates (micro firms).

Many of our members across Queensland are already enjoying the benefits of VLL. If you meet the eligibility criteria and are not currently using VLL, we encourage you to take advantage of this great free service. Contact the library to confirm your eligibility and arrange access.

Help and support

To help users gain the most out of VLL, we offer training and assistance in accessing and effectively using the available resources. Online training or support via Skype is available for users who are unable to visit the library in person – contact us for details.

Feedback

We are keen to hear your views about VLL and the content available. Your feedback will help us identify issues and continue to make improvements to this service.

Terms of use

By registering, accessing and using VLL, users agree to be bound by our terms of use, negotiated with the publishers.
